NFQ Level 7, Special Purpose Award

The Diploma in Law and Legal English is a one-year, full-time course. It is available only to students from partner Chinese universities, with whom University College Cork signs a bilateral agreement under Statute 263 of the National University of Ireland, who spend one year studying in University College Cork. Having studied for two years at a partner Chinese university, students will study for one year at University College Cork, taking the Diploma programme to the value of 60 credits.

The Diploma in Law and Legal English consists of core modules to the value of 45 credits and elective modules to the value of 15 credits. In order to be admitted to the University Examination in Law and Legal English, a student must have satisfactorily attended prescribed modules to the value of 60 credits.

Admission to Higher Degrees

Students who obtain a minimum grade equivalent to Second Class Honours Grade I in their bachelor's degree from their Chinese home university and a minimum of Second Class Honours Grade I in the Diploma in Law and Legal English are eligible to apply for admission to higher degrees offered by the School of Law.
